

Space Dream

In some weird way, I was on a ship. Heading not into space, but to a little floating dot in the sky. As I got closer, the features of the dot became more distinguishable. It was a floating island that was spherical in shape. Probably thousands of feet in the sky. It seemed very organic, as it was made up of dirt, soil, plants, and trees. Each time they were interrupted by three enormous holes that revealed a semi hollowed inside of the island. One of the holes located more towards the center of the island was still half filled with dirt, that somehow didn't spill out.

Naturally, I moved towards this hole. It seemed the best suited for me to land my ship or this ship.

As I proceeded to land, I noticed the inside of this island was in fact, semi hollow. The bottom half of the island was still filled with dirt that served the purpose of being the ground. While upper half was cleared. Only obstructed by the exterior lining of the island, while the two massive holes brought in natural light to the inside.

I was amazed at the structure of the place. As I finally stopped the ship, I noticed that there where hut like structures that hinted at other people living here. At first thought, the island so far seemed like a cozy place for anyone to live in, but after giving a quick glance to the island I noticed something unusual.

No ships.